

PFISTER MAKES ANOTHER MOVE

Wants Milwaukee Prosecuting Attorney Pre- vented From Trying His Case.

CHARGES THE PLOT IS TO RUIN HIM

Alleges That District Attorney's Office Is Back Of The Move--McGovern Is Also Defendant In Big Suit.

(Special to The Gazette.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 4.—Charles F. Pfister, charged with having embezzled $14,000 from the Wisconsin Rendering company, yesterday demanded that District Attorney McGovern and his assistants be ousted from authority in his pending trial on the grounds that they are interested persons and that as they are defendants in the civil suit brought by him to recover heavy damages for libel and conspiracy disinterested persons should be employed by the state to try the case. The case will be argued next Saturday.

Attorney James L. O'Connor moved for a speedy trial in the case of Frank F. Schultz, under indictment on charges of extortion and perjury, and former District Attorney W. H. Bennett requested similar action in the case of Supervisor John Weisenthal, charged with bribery, whose bail was reduced from $2,000 to $500. Both were promised consideration.

ATTORNEY DISCUSSES PFISTER CASE

Mr. Pfister was in court when the session was called yesterday morning. After his attorneys had asked that the state be represented by disinterested persons in his pending trial District Attorney McGovern arose and said:

"The county jail is filled with defendants who have been there from three to six months. Practice demands that they be given preference over persons on bail. That is the controlling consideration in making up the present calendar.

"I may refer to the Pfister case as a peculiar one. The situation is unusual. Passing over newspaper comment and report for the present, I may say to the court that since the grand jury returned an indictment against the defendant suit has been brought against myself, Mr. Cochran and Mr. Goff, as well as others, alleging conspiracy for the purpose of ruining the Pfister interests in causing an indictment to be returned. A civil action in the case is now pending. This renders a trial of the criminal case impossible now.

INSISTS ON A FAIR TRIAL

"The charge against the district attorney's office is either true or false. If it be true, then we should not be allowed to prosecute the indictment. The laws of the state and the practice of criminal courts forbid this. If it be false, the case is equally strong. The state ought not to be handicapped in either instance with an unfired charge pending to embarrass the prosecution. This precludes an unfair and unbiased trial.

"I am ready to cooperate with the defense for as speedy a trial as is possible.

In responding to Mr. McGovern, Attorney Kearney remarked that he agreed that a speedy trial should be accorded. He laid stress on the Pfister interests in Milwaukee, insisting that they would suffer as long as the indictment remained untried.

Ambassador Meyer Bears Message— Rumors That Meyer Will Succeed Cortelyou in Cabinet.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New York, October 4.—Ambassador George von L. Meyer, representing the United States at the Court of St. Petersburg arrived home today on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm. It is understood that Mr. Meyer brings to President Roosevelt personal greetings from the czar and other messages of appreciation for the part which Mr. Roosevelt played in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan. Mr. Meyer is on an extended leave of absence after the hard work which he did in St. Petersburg and comes home to join Mrs. and Miss Meyer, who have been visiting in the United States since early in the summer.

A Cabinet Portfolio?

The arrival in the United States of Ambassador Meyer has given rise to all sorts of rumors regarding Cabinet changes. The gist of current reports is that Mr. Roosevelt is so pleased with the work accomplished by Ambassador Meyer that he wants him in his official family at Washington. Opinion is divided as to what place the President would offer Mr. Meyer. Some are inclined to the belief that he would have him postmaster-general, succeeding Mr. Cortelyou, when the latter takes the treasury portfolio upon the retirement of Secretary Shaw, as it is understood he will do. Or, he may be made secretary of the navy, succeeding Mr. Bonaparte when the latter is promoted on the retirement of Attorney-General Moody, which is considered certain. The views of Mr. Meyer, of course, have not been ascertained and it is certain that he will be besieged by reporters to express an opinion when he arrives here within a day or two.

CABINET TALK OF EXCLUSION

Methods Of Enforcing The Law Are Undergo A Decided Change At Once.

THE CHINESE OBJECT TO THE COOLIE

Construction Placed Upon This Word By The California Officials Is An Insult To The Better Classes.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, Oct. 4.—It practically was decided at Tuesday's Cabinet meeting that radical changes are necessary in carrying out the provisions of the Chinese exclusion law.

Secretary Taft, fresh from the Orient, where he found China retaliating by excluding the products of American labor, took up a large portion of the session in giving his observations. He declared that the Chinese government looks upon the word "coolie" as a reproach in connection with Chinese immigrants.

In addition to changing the methods of carrying out the law the President will take the subject up in his message, and probably will recommend an amendment to the present law.

One of the important developments at the meeting was the fact that the President's efforts last summer to allay the indignation of the Chinese by a circular of instructions to the American minister to China and consular officers therein, failed of its purpose. Minister Rockhill reported that it had not been found possible to carry out the instructions contained in the circular without doing great injustice to worthy Chinese.

Taft Explains Failure.

It developed that the requirement that American consuls identify the Chinese seeking certificates admitting them to American ports imposed a task upon these officials beyond their ability. The Chinese applicant, said Secretary Taft, frequently came from some place far distant from the American consulate and the consul was consequently obliged to refuse to identify as proper persons to be admitted to the United States many very worthy Chinese, which, of course, led to bitter complaint and fostered boycott feeling. Then a Chinese merchant who desired to send his son as a shop assistant to his branch store in the United States, with a view to ultimately admitting his son to partnership, found that the boy was barred on the charge that he was a coolie. Chinese living in the British and French and Portuguese Asiatic colonies, did not see why they could not be admitted to America, under proper passports, instead of being required to produce the unpopular certificate. There were only a few of the complaints made against the administration of the existing exclusion law.

The trend of the opinion in the cabinet meeting was that these complaints after all were directed rather against the construction placed upon the law than against the act itself, and especially against the definition given in California to the term "coolie," so it was practically decided that some important changes in the present regulations must be made.

ALLEGES YOUNG CUDAHY WAS PARTY TO THE CRIME

Pat Crowe Tells The Public The Fifteen Year Old Boy Planned The Whole Venture.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 4.—Pat Crowe, who was arrested in Butte by detectives after he had been about the city for a week, introducing himself to various persons, declared that the "kidnapping" of Eddie Cudahy and subsequent demand on his father for a ransom was suggested by the boy himself. Here are the facts, according to his story:

On Sept. 6, 1905, he met young Cudahy on the street, and the boy first broached the subject of working the old man for a big ransom. At first Crowe paid no attention to the proposition, but it was repeated later with such details that he concluded to go in with the boy.

A third party was taken in, but he "got cold feet," believing the scheme was a trap. The Cudahy boy proposed demanding $50,000 from his father, but Crowe and the second party he took into the scheme thought $25,000 was enough.

How Money Was Divided.

The story of Crowe as to how the kidnapping was worked, and how Cudahy drove out to a lonesome place and left the money, agrees fully with the first published accounts of the affair, but he says young Cudahy was the leading spirit of the adventure and was never a prisoner.

The three divided the $25,000, young Cudahy being given $8,000 as his share. He was then taken to his home and left a few blocks from the Cudahy house.

Incidentally Crowe gives a story of his life, and says he was a prosperous butcher in South Omaha when the elder Cudahy came there, built a packing house, and drove him out of business. After that he went to work for Cudahy and thus became acquainted with the family.

Mrs. Cudahy, Ridicules Idea.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 4.—Mrs. E. A. Cudahy ridicules the statement made by Crowe in Butte to the effect that Eddie himself was a party to the kidnapping and that he received $5,000 of his father's money.

"Why, it is outrageous," said Mrs. Cudahy, "to believe that a boy of 15 should think of such a thing. What could he do with the money. Why does any one want to pay any attention to the absurd stories of this man Crowe?"

Both the boy and his father had retired for the night when the news of Crowe's version of the origin of the plot reached Omaha, and Mrs. Cudahy refused to disturb them, declaring that the suggestion was so manifestly absurd that it was entirely unworthy of credence.

Mr. Cudahy Sr. said that he was as anxious as ever to prosecute Crowe. Two deputy sheriffs left for Butte, Mont., armed with requisition papers ordering the return of Pat Crowe to this city. Chief Donohue has filed an information charging him with shooting Policeman Jackson with intent to kill two weeks ago.

SHLICHTER RESIGNS ATHLETIC BOARD

Wisconsin Professor Retires from Management of Athletics—Small Game Today.

[SPECIAL TO THIS GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 4.—Critics look for a big score in the football game here today between the Wisconsin varsity and the eleven from Marquette college, Milwaukee, a Catholic academy. It is said that King has called upon the Badgers for a "score of three figures," but he will not affirm this and it is known to be contrary to his policy to encourage mere piling up of points against weak teams in inconsequential early season games. Wisconsin will have "Pat" Donovan in the line for the first game this season. The visitors are little better than a good high school aggregation, have had but brief practice and this is their first game this year. They average about 165 pounds, nearly 20 pounds per man less than the varsity. On this set of facts alone the score should be large.

Hard Practice
King administered hard practice yesterday, giving no rest in anticipation of the midweek contest, which, in fact, is expected to give only mediocre practice. The varsity scrubs are holding the Badger regulars well, this fact being accounted for by the presence on the second eleven of a number of candidates who are hard after places on the first team.

Slichter Resigns
Professor Charles S. Slichter, faculty supervisor of athletics at the University of Wisconsin, has resigned, and for the first time in the Badger camp. For five years Professor Slichter has been the faculty coach of all Badger athletic teams, and justly or otherwise, he has always been blamed when a capable athlete has been "knocked out" by the faculty. He has even been directly accused of going out and seeking evidence against the amateur standing of star football players against whom it was said he had personal dislikes. Such a case is that of Earl W. Schreiber, who was protested by Chicago on charges that were not substantiated. It is certain that Professor Slichter and Dean Charles N. Gregory of the law school went to Springfield and procured evidence that Schreiber coached a high school team there for money. Then they presented this evidence to the faculty athletic council and Schreiber was declared ineligible. This charge had not been among those urged by the protest of Chicago.

Schreiber's Case
How much of this action was caused by over-zealousness on the part of the two faculty members was never clearly established, but they were severely spoken of by the students generally at that time. Schreiber was a star back field player on the football team and also a heavy batter and clean infield player on the baseball nine, and his loss was keenly felt. He was after a year or two reinstated, but refused to again play at Madison. It is probable that a commendable effort to protect "pure athletics" was the motive of Messrs. Slichter and Gregory, but the enthusiastic students never seemed able to see it that way. There was satisfaction felt when Dean Gregory left here to take charge of the Iowa state law school and this feeling again manifests itself upon the resignation of Professor Slichter. Some students even go so far as to blame him for the loss of the former prestige held in western intercollegiate athletics by the University of Wisconsin, and also for the nasty upheaval here last year at the close of the third successive disastrous football season. Much of this was understood, for it is said that Professor Slichter did all he could for the building of winning teams, and to his efforts is attributed the presence of "Dick" Remp, the star Badger center rush, in the football training quarters this fall.

Possible Successors
Among those who are mentioned as the successor of Professor Slichter are Professors B. V. Swenson, Victor Kenner, T. S. Adams and J. F. A. Pyre. The faculty supervisorship has been attached to it a salary of $500 a year. He is invested with practical veto power over all athletes and acts of athletic managers, and before each intercollegiate game the coaches are required to submit to him a list of candidates for the contest, and he passes upon the eligibility of each one. In turn the faculty holds him responsible for the "purity and good scholarship" of all athletes, and as the students abhor the interference of the faculty in the eligibility of any good athlete, the duty of the supervisor is sometimes far from enviable.

PRESERVING A GOOD EFFECT

As the prettiest hat can be spoiled by unsuitable wearing, care should be taken to avoid such a sartorial disaster. The hair may be dressed unbecomingly, the pose when flitting may be a one-sided one, and so one through a long list of causes for the ruin of a hat. The one-sided pose, however, is the bane of most women, because they do not observe proper care in fitting their hats before buying them.

It is well worth following the advice of a woman who has become famous for the beauty of her hats in selecting your autumn crown of glory. Her invariable rule is to try on a hat both standing and sitting. It may be becoming in the first pose and little short of ridiculous in the second. A perfect hat will look well either standing or sitting. "Do not stand close before the mirror," says she, "walk away from it and get a glimpse of yourself from a distance. Assume a number of different attitudes, characteristic ones that you would naturally take when wearing the hat, and see if the designer suits you in them all."

And in the foregoing paragraph you have the gist of all good advice in the matter of hat buying.

andering through the fluted folds of the brim at the back until it finds an effective outlet to fall over against the hair. The dent through which the feather finds its escape is then closed at the top with an effective little bow of red velvet ribbon.

Light facings are effectively used in trimming several of the smart dark hats, especially where the brim is inverted. These facings are in a lighter tone of the same color of the hat or in another color that contrasts prettily. A rich brown felt has a facing of pale cream panne velvet, put on with the narrowest piping of brown and white striped silk. The crown of the hat is entirely covered with a superb brown bird. The slender head of the bird rests over the hair, with the wings flatly outspread and the tail drooping over the back of the hat. Concealing the band are loops of brown velvet ribbon, edged with the narrowest ruffles of cream throat lace, making a most delightful effect.

A bright blue velvet toque is in excellent taste. It was seen a few days ago by a noted society woman, who immediately added it to her collection of autumn headgear. The hat was trimmed with choux of blue satin ribbon at the right and large shaded blue velvet roses at the right and back. Knots of the blue ribbon and large blue velvet roses formed a cache-poeuille at the back.

One cannot describe all the hats displayed in the shops to tempt feminine buyers—and male ones, too, for it is an open secret that many a smartly gowned woman frequently owes a stunning hat to the good taste and generous impulses of her husband—these designs which appeal so irresistibly to the eye that they are irresistible for special mention. Such a hat is a large green design trimmed with gold lace and plumes. The back is upturned and fluted; in fact it is bent forward for half its size in a most wonderful way. The indentures are all filled in with gold lace, daintily fluted. The front is short, gradually widening as it reaches the sides meeting the reversed back. Draped across the front is a plume of dark green shading to palest almond white. Jaunty light felt hats are seen in countless numbers and endless variety. They are in most instances designed for general wear, but some are made to look very dressy with wings perched under the brim and a band of velvet ribbon brought around the crown and tied in a bow. Sometimes instead of the wing there is a flight of very tiny birds in bright hue.

MONROE TELEPHONE COMPANY'S POSITION

Attorney General Gives An Opinion On The Regulation of Telephone Rates.

[SPECIAL TO THIS GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 4.—A city has not the authority to fix or limit the rates charged for service by a telephone company operating under a municipal franchise, and when such regulation of limitation of rates is made a part of a franchise by a municipality, that provision is without validity. The remedy against exorbitant rates, however, is not absent, for any municipality can bring suit to have the rates of a franchise declared unreasonable. This is the substance of an opinion rendered by Attorney General Sturdevant in response to inquiries made by City Attorney A. S. Douglas of Monroe, who called upon and conferred with the state's legal advisor in relation to a franchise of the Monroe Telephone company. The city attorney was desirous that the attorney general give consent to the bringing of an action in the name of the state to declare void the franchise of the company, on the ground that the company proposed to raise its rates of service largely above the rates specified in the franchise ordinance. So far as the controversy in Monroe is concerned the opinion of Attorney General Sturdevant is against the city and in favor of the telephone company. If the city had the right to fix or limit the rates, the company could not raise the rates under its franchise, but it is quite another thing for a patron to establish in a legal action the fact that rates are "unreasonable," for that would involve the examination of the cost of the service and would entail so many other details as to make a long and difficult process of litigation.

The Monroe Telephone company secured a municipal franchise by an ordinance enacted June 21, 1929. By provisions in that ordinance it was set forth that the rates for telephone service in places of business should be not more than $2 a month and for residences, $1 a month. The company now proposes to raise the rates to $2.50 a month for business places and $1.50 a month for residences. To these proposed increases the city objected and the city attorney of Monroe held a conference with Attorney General Sturdevant to determine upon a line of action. Mr. Douglas was of the opinion that the proposed increases of rates would be a palpable violation of the terms of the franchise and the city could bring suit to vacate the rights of the corporation. The attorney general made a careful examination of the authorities and came to the conclusion that the legislature alone has the right to fix or regulate the rates of public service corporations and that at the time the franchise ordinance was enacted the city of Monroe had no such right. The attorney general holds that the legislature might provide that municipalities may regulate rates. The attorney general has written his opinion at length to City Attorney Douglas and has in closing suggested that the patrons of the telephone company are not without a remedy, that the telephone company is a public servant and has no right to bring an action and if it is shown that the rates are unreasonable the court will give relief. There may, however, be a way, however, in which the municipality can get at the company. The city has the right to control, regulate and police the streets, and with this police power might effectively manage the corporation.

RAILWAY MEN LIKE THE INVESTIGATION

Say That They Are 'Anxious Not To Have To Give Rebates To The Producers And Shippers.'

The conviction of the Chicago packers is regarded with satisfaction in railroad circles in Washington. The fear of similar convictions, railroad men say, will be an excellent deterrent in the future for greedy corporations which are often in a position to offer a rate discrimination in their favor or losing a large and profitable business. Many of the large industrial combinations have employed special freight agents to ferret out the lowest possible rate, irrespective of what the published rate might be. The result was to put a premium on evasions of the law.

In this connection railroad men are citing the recent testimony of A. B. Slickney, President of the Chicago Great Western Railroad Company, before Judge Belthia in the federal court at Chicago in an interstate commerce case. Mr. Slickney said: "The packer generally tells you that if you want the business you must haul the meat for the price he names. In fixing the rate on dressed meats we don't have much to say. The packer generally makes the rate." It is recalled here that in the testimony of railroad officers before the senate committee on interstate commerce all these officers strongly condemned the rebate system and urged that the Elkins law against rebates be strictly enforced. In addition, many railroad presidents, in newspaper interviews and magazine articles, have registered their emphatic disapproval of the rebate.

George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company and the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in a recent magazine article stated:

"The railroad companies are just as anxious to abolish discriminations, rebates, and all the devices which more or less, from necessity, characterized the past, as the most ardent reformers can be, and they have not only accomplished much in this direction by their own efforts, but they have likewise aided in securing legislation to prevent these things. The average shipper always wants a concession."

President Samuel Spencer of the Southern Railway said recently: "There is no difference of opinion" on the subject that rebates are wrong and that they must be stopped; that secret and discriminatory devices of all kinds, direct or indirect, must meet with the same fate, and to use the president's own expression, that "the highways of transportation must be kept open to all upon equal terms." On that basis, the railway companies are ready and anxious to aid and cooperate.

James J. Hill, in an interview on the subject, has said:

"Every railroadman would be happy to have rebates abolished and the law against them enforced."

Charles F. Tuttle, President of the Boston & Maine Railroad, wrote, in a recent magazine article:

"I am heartily in favor of such carefully thought out additional legislation as may be found needful for ending, and forever preventing, railways from conspiring to give, and what is vastly more important, their customers from combining to extort, any favors or facilities that may not, under the circumstances and conditions, be given to and received by all."

The present law seems adequate and sufficient, if thoroughly applied, to enable the Interstate Commerce Commission to bring to light, punish, and prevent every form of rebating and secret rate giving or taking."

David Wilcox, President of the Delaware & Hudson Company, in his last official report to stockholders, says:

"The recent discussion of the subject makes it proper to say that this company, in common with the railway companies of the country, has no desire to give rebates, secret cutting or unjust discrimination or undue or unreasonable preference in railway service shall be tolerated. Such practices are prohibited by existing statutes, and, as the Interstate Commerce Commission states in its last annual report, have practically ceased. If anything further can be devised in the direction of their suppression it will undoubtedly have the earnest support of the railway."

President W. P. Truesdale, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railway, in his address before the last annual meeting of the company in New York, declared:

"The railway interests are practically a unit in favoring the strict enforcement of existing laws or the enactment of others to prevent the payment of rebates in any of the several forms of discrimination which have been more or less prevalent and very justly condemned. Those are a few of the utterances of railroad presidents all over the country denouncing the rebate evil. At the same time, the railroad men point out that none of the rate bills presented in congress during the last session touches the rebate question in the slightest degree. Rebates, they argue, would be possible under any form of government control. Their contention is that the enforcement of present legislation is amply sufficient to stamp out the evil."

STATE VETERINARIAN ROBERTS FOUND WHOLE HERD AFFLICTED

With Tuberculosis on Occasion of a Recent Visit to Racine and Cat-tle Were Condemned.
State Veterinarian E. D. Roberts has returned from a trip to Racine, where he examined a herd of cattle supposed to be afflicted with tuberculosis. It was found that the suspicions were well founded and it was necessary to order every one of them killed. The farm is located in a large dairying section and it is believed that the precautions taken will check any further spread of the disease.

SHADE TREES IN MANY LOCALITIES

ARE COVERED WITH A SMALLS WORM THIS YEAR.

PRODUCT OF EARLIER PESTS

Second Crop of These Tree Destroyer Appear in Janesville In Some Sections.

Some of the shade trees on lawns and parks in the city are now subject to attack by dark caterpillars, about an inch and a quarter long, covered with long, white hairs, and spinning for the protection of the colony in which they live a dirty, white, silken web, covering, when fully developed, the entire terminal portion of the branch infested. This insect is the fall web worm, known for many years as a tree pest in lawn and orchard, but more abundant and attracting more attention than usual last year and this. Observations by the Kansas Experiment station establish the fact that for this region the insect is two-brooded, and hence more troublesome than in States further north, where but a single brood is matured in a season. Its life history is in brief as follows: The parent insect is a white moth about an inch in extent of wings. It appears in April and May from pupae which have passed the winter under rubbish and in loose soil at the foot of the trees on which the caterpillars of the preceding autumn had fed. These moths, which are night flyers, after mating, take to the trees and lay eggs in clusters on leaves mostly in open spaces and at the tips of the branches. The young caterpillars are social, and remain for most of their growth in the colonies hatching together. On hatching, they at once begin to spin webs for protection and begin to spin the webs are extended to correspond until they attain the size of a foot or considerably more in dimensions, depending upon the size of the colony. The first attacks merely shred the leaves, but later the entire leaf is eaten, and while at the time of the attack of the more abundant fall brood the tree is so far matured that no great injury to its vigor results, the presence of the worms is very disagreeable, especially when, as is nearly full grown, they begin to crawl more widely, scattering over trunk and neighboring porches, fences and walks. The mature caterpillars descend the tree and hide under matted leaves or other rubbish, or in hollows and crevices, or in the loose soil to the depth of an inch or two beneath. Here they enter the dormant pupa stage, in which they remain until the latter part of July or the first of August, when they changed into moths. These soon after lay eggs, as did the earlier brood, and unless the first brood of caterpillars was greatly reduced by disease or parasites, the second brood is equally numerous and proportionally destructive. In one summer colony over six hundred moths matured. Others are almost entirely destroyed by parasites, of which there are two forms. Two-winged flies, much like house flies in general appearance, are abundantly bred from some colonies. Egg-eating flies, known by the general name of braconids or ichneumon flies are, however, more widely effective, and are frequently reared in great numbers.

The late generation of caterpillars have habits like the earlier, except that, entering their dormant state, later in the season, they remain therein until the next spring, when they hatch into moths by which the eggs for the early colonies are deposited. Most common shade and orchard trees are subject to the attacks of these pests. They are specially fond of elm, box elder, hickory, ash, apple and plum, but scattered colonies occur in various other trees. Owing to their hatching in dense colonies, it is comparatively easy to check their multiplication and prevent the appearance of the disgusting webs by destroying the caterpillars when young. They are mostly to be sought for at the tips of the branches toward the open, and when discovered they may be removed for destruction, or destroyed where they are. In the latter case a kerosene torch will cook them with little injury to the branch, or a spray of arsenical poison may be applied. These methods should be repeated, if necessary, and may also be employed in the destruction of the colonies after they have grown larger, but with correspondingly greater expense and trouble. The pupae may be found, sometimes many together, in attractive situations about the trees, subject to attack, and their collection may be made so effectively as to greatly lessen the annoyance incident to the presence of the annoying brood.

Bands about the trees are absolutely of no avail against the attacks of this insect, as the female is amply winged, and uniformly reaches by flying the leaves on which she deposits her eggs.

General Railway News.
The Great Northern announces that it has practically finished all grading in Nebraska between Sioux City and Ashland, and the bridge gages are being the Platte and other rivers. The new line will give the Burlington-Grant Northern route the short line from Deaver to Minneapolis and Duluth and will also permit the Burlington to enter the Kansas City-Oma-ha trade to the Twin Cities and Duluth.

Committees representing the Central Freight Association and the trans-continental lines are to hold a conference in Chicago on October 10 for the adjustment of differences due to the latter making and publishing through rates to the Pacific coast without first obtaining the consent of initial lines.

Officials of the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railways are much displeased over the report recently circulated that the system was contemplating extending its roads to the Pacific coast. Subsequent developments have proved that the rumors were circulated for ulterior motives by persons heavily interested in the stock market. The St. Paul extension will be built, probably, but not in the immediate future, as the studies had, as certain developments must take place before the plan is decided upon.

Under an agreement with the attorney-general the Pennsylvania, on behalf of other roads operating in the state will make a test in the courts to determine whether the companies have the right to issue passes, and if so, whether the road commission has a right to call for the list of pass holders. The railroads have already refused to furnish such a list.

TEN YEARS MORE FOR FRANK HOPE

Alias Punshon, the Swindler Who Operated in Janesville Years Ago—Goes To Joliet.

Frank Hope, alias Punshon, who was sent to state's prison from Janesville in 1872 to serve ten years for larceny, and again for three years in 1884, and who was arrested several weeks ago for swindling women and robbing them of money and jewelry, must return to Joliet penitentiary. He is 59 years old and in all has served thirty-nine years behind the bars. He was again convicted on a plea of guilty in Judge Tuley's court in Chicago and sentenced to prison for ten years. Hope's real name is said to be Punshon, and it is said he has respectable relatives in London, England. He began his criminal career at an early age and has almost constantly been in trouble, since reaching his majority. The defendant was released from prison the latter part of last August and had been at liberty but two weeks when he was again behind the bars. He confessed that he advertised for a woman to act as traveling companion for children and then robbed the applicants of their valuables.

NEARLY A HUNDRED COUPLES AT DEGREE OF HONOR DANCE

Charles Smith's Orchestra Played for Delightful Affair at Central Hall.

Nearly a hundred couples attended the autumn dancing party given at Central hall last evening under the auspices of Olive Lodge No. 27, Degree of Honor. Asparagus, dahlias and other flowers were effectively used in the decorations and easy chairs and numerous sofa pillows added much to the attractiveness of the ball-room. Prof. Charles Smith and his orchestra of five pieces played a series of inspiring numbers and the festivities continued until one o'clock. The committee of arrangements consisted of Margaret Cassidy, Mae Conroy, Nellie Ryan, and Maud Conroy, and the floor committee of Edward Kienow, Frank Sullivan, John Smith, J. J. Kelly, and Willis Taylor.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.
A Remedy Which Has Revolutionized the Treatment of Stomach Troubles.

The remedy is not heralded as a wonderful discovery nor yet a secret patent medicine, neither is it claimed to cure anything except dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach troubles with which nine out of ten suffer. The remedy is in the form of pleasant tasting tablets or lozenges, containing vegetable and fruit essences, pure aseptic pepsin (government test) golden seal and diastase. The tablets are sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Many interesting experiments to test the digestive power of Stuart's Tablets show that one grain of the active principle contained in them is sufficient to thoroughly digest 3,000 grains of raw meat, eggs and other wholesome food.

Stuart's Tablets do not act upon the bowels like after dinner pills and cheap cathartics, which simply irritate and inflame the intestines without having any effect whatever in digesting food or curing indigestion.

If the stomach can be rested and assisted in the work of digestion it will very soon recover its normal vigor, as no organ is so much abused and overworked as the stomach.

This success has been secured, in secret, of the remarkable success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, a remedy practically unknown a few years ago and now the most widely known of any treatment for stomach weakness.

This success has been secured entirely upon its merits as a digestive pure and simple, because there can be no stomach trouble if the food is promptly digested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets act entirely on the food eaten, digesting it completely, so that it can be assimilated into blood, nerve and tissue. They cure dyspepsia, water brash, sour stomach, gas and bloating after meals, because they furnish the digestive power which weak stomachs lack and unless that lack is supplied it is useless to attempt to cure by the use of "tonics," "pills" and "cathartics" which have absolutely no digestive power.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be found at all drug stores and the regular use of one or two of them after meals will demonstrate their merit better than any other argument.

= FORTY YEARS AGO =

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, October 4, 1865.—City Items.—The premises of very many of our citizens were invaded last night by J. Frost and plants and vines show impress of his foot. The leaves are whispering together about his coyness in thus coming at the dead of night, and their blushes will soon tell how unwelcome he is.

Two of our finest men—Messrs. J. C. Wingate and Frank Smith—have closed up their business engagements in this city and are about to take their departure for Minnesota, where they are to enter into partnership mercantile business. What is our loss in their removal from here will be more decidedly the gain of the place they are about to locate in. We wish them most abundant success in this new business sphere.

Constitutional.—The assent of five more States is necessary to perfect the constitutional abolition of slavery in the Union. Although the action of Mississippi, South Carolina, Alabama—which will be imitated by other States—which is in accordance with the spirit of the amendment, its formal adoption by the Legislatures is necessary. Kentucky, it is barely possible, may give its assent notwithstanding the small opposition majority. President Johnson's policy toward her is with that reference. Nevada will soon be in to add her vote, and there is hope of New Jersey. While the question is yet an open one there does not appear to be any grounds for serious apprehensions for the result.

Good Reading.—There is a spice of Gospel truth in the sublimated paragraph from the Quincy Whig which people generally are not apt to lay to heart.

We notice that the Dubuque Times has shut down publishing gratuitous notices for everybody and everything. It has taken a step in the right direction. There are people in every community that will not do the first thing toward the support of the press, but they are always ready to avail themselves of the benefits it can confer. A person might go into a store and ask the merchant to give a half a yard of calico or a spool of thread because they are small items, as to ask the editor to notice his business for nothing. Newspapers are usually published for the purpose of assisting the proprietor to obtain his bread and butter as well as to advance public interests.

A company of fifty noted players are employed in the presentation of "Parsifal," and the scenery is all adequate, seven massive stage settings being carried by the organization. STILL AT THE HELM.

The governor will not forsake the ship of state until she is dry docked
for repairs.

The senate is not aluring and he will go down with the ship rather than desert it for the White House.

God's patient poor, and the rest of us who are not so patient, will continue to drag out an existence.

To be or not to be, Governor, Senator, or President, is now the problem.
If the two former offices can be held,
while the latter is being captured, the solution will be easy.

There's no reason why this can't be done. With Spooner in the senate and Davidson in the anti room at Madison,
the state and nation will jog along
with old time regularity.

There's no obstacle in the way for the people are in complacent mood,
and the gratifying of personal ambition is not only considered legitimate,
but highly commendable.

Wisconsin will be honored in 1908

quer. "So mote it be."

GOOD FOR THE MAYOR.

Mayor Hutchinson is to be congratulated by all good citizens for the stand
which he has taken on the question of street repairs.

The fact has been notorious for years, that an order to repair a street
was interpreted to mean free license
to macadamize it, and thousands of dollars of ward funds have been diverted to this channel.

City officers have ignored the law
which prohibits this kind of work and have not unfrequently been a party
to encouraging the scheme.

The mayor is right in his claim that it is not only a violation of law, but that it is unfair to taxpayers.

If one street can be macadamized at public expense, there is no reason why
every street should not be treated in the same way.

The streets of Janesville are not a credit to the city and every available
dollar in the ward funds can be spent
to good advantage on legitimate repairs, which come within the law.

Twenty-five years ago South Main street was the most popular drive in the city and the roadbed was kept in good condition at moderate expense.

Today, with half the driving, and thousands of dollars invested, the street is constantly out of repair, and one of the poorest in the city. These conditions are true, to greater or less extent, of many other streets.

If the mayor can outline some plan
to improve these conditions, he will be supported by the taxpayers. Neglect is the poorest economy ever practiced by a city, and the streets of Janesville are an object lesson along this line.

Nature has provided an abundance
of material close at hand, the people have paid for a plant to utilize this material, and there is no reason why
the streets should not be kept in first class condition.

BANKING PUBLICITY.

Many banks and trust companies
throughout the United States, says the Wall Street Journal, have united in organizing what is called, The Banking Publicity Association of the United States. The object of this association, in addition to affording bank and trust company managers opportunity to meet at certain times to discuss questions relating to the welfare of their business, is to establish headquarters in each of the large cities

with a manager, whose duty it should be to keep in touch with banking institutions throughout the country in order that there may be an interchange of information regarding the advertising of their business.

This seems to us to be a very sensible movement and one which should be of practical value, not only to the banks and trust companies, but also
to the great body of bank depositors.

We believe thoroughly in banking publicity, not only that publicity which obliges these institutions to make frequent reports of their condition, but also that publicity which facilitates the extension of their business. We see no reason why banks and trust companies should not advertise the same as any other department of business.

Moreover, this advertising might well
be systematized so as to produce the best results. It ought, however, to be that advertising that will inspire confidence and not advertising that will breed distrust. It should be advertising that will promote the saving instinct of the people, leading them to put larger trust in banking institutions, thus increasing the great volume of deposits available for the commercial transactions of the country. The banks and trust companies have within recent years performed a really remarkable work, the economic significance of which is hardly realized, in so extending their business as to induce a large number of persons to put their money in banks who have
in other years maintained no bank or trust company accounts. It is not necessary that a banking institution
should advertise an excessive rate of interest in order to get business, but it may so advertise its facilities, its capital, its resources, its management
as to widen very greatly the scope of its operations.

Every dollar deposited in a bank,
for the object of accumulation, accomplishes a double purpose. It evidences first a practical desire to save money, on the part of the owner and this is the first step on the road to success.

There are hundreds of people in Janesville who are living up to their income, through the years when they are at their best as producers, who could just as well have a bank account as not, if they would practice
a little economy.

The little interest, which may or may not accrue, is of but little importance, as compared with the faculty of saving, which soon becomes a habit
when faithfully encouraged.

Then every dollar deposited means another dollar in circulation for the benefit of commerce and trade. The nimble dollar is a blessing to humanity. It is gratifying to know that the banks of the country are waking up to the fact not only that it pays
to advertise, but that in a larger sense
it pays to encourage people to cultivate the habit of saving.

GERMAN BEET SUGAR.

The sharp advance in sugar, which occurred last winter, was said to be due to a short crop in Germany. These conditions do not exist this year, and the chances are that present prices
will not materially advance.

The beet sugar factories in France
are more or less demoralized, on account of high priced beets and low priced sugar, and some of them are unable to carry out their contracts.
Regarding the German crop Vice Consul Burrell of Madiogburg writes that experts who have recently inspected the sugar beet producing districts of Germany state that the prospects for the sugar yield are excellent.
On account of this year's high sugar
price considerable more land has been planted in sugar beets. Nevertheless,
complaints are heard from all sides
that the proportion of sugar in the beet is from 2 to 3 per cent less than in former years. It is possible, however, that this reduction may disappear if the present dry weather with cool nights continues, so that, according to the opinion held here,
Germany may count on a large yield
of sugar.

Much less land has been devoted to the cultivation of beet seed than was the case last year, but the opinion
seems to be general that an average harvest is to be expected. Some regions have suffered excessively from
the severe weather this summer, and the extraordinarily fierce storms have destroyed in some places two-thirds of the plants. The development of the seed is good, and promises a high quality if it should not be injured by long continuing rain. The harvest of 1904 was small, on account of the great drought. This, together with the increase in the cultivation of the sugar beet this year, has practically
cleared the entire stock, so that sugar
beet seed will be in demand this year, and it is asserted that the amount which will be produced will be entirely sold out. It is indeed doubtful if there will be enough to meet the demand.

In the face of these conditions Rock county growers have occasion to feel satisfied with the home market. Captain Davidson has been in the business long enough to know that six cent sugar is the exception, and not the rule.

Twenty pounds of sugar for a dollar has been the catchline of many advertisements for the past 20 years, and while other staples have maintained a permanent advance, sugar has kept
near the five cent mark and is likely to remain there.

PRESS COMMENT.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The only
smile that some men cultivate is the kind they can buy for a dime.

La Crosse Leader-Press: The Marshall Times, Chairman Connor's
home paper, admits that Mr. Connor
is the logical candidate for governor.

Chicago Tribune: Anxious brother,

endeavor to reassure yourself. Life insurance will be as good as ever, and cheaper than ever, after the storm
blows over.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: The time may come in Milwaukee when children yet unborn will hang indictments in their best rooms to show that they are descended from people of prominence.

Chicago Record-Herald: Mrs. Chad-wick's lawyers wanted $2,100 for their services in her behalf, but were allowed only $200. Evidently the court took into account the advertising they got.

Boston Transcript: The fame of some celebrities is not easily eclipsed.
Thus the book of "Five Hundred Proper and Up-to-Date Toasts," which is hawked on all the trains, still bears
as a cover design the likeness of Senator C. M. Depew.

Racine Journal: As significant
proof we are a world power comes
word that our national dress makers'
association declare we shall not follow the fashion of Paris when it comes to short waists and long skirts.

Exchange: Emperor William says
there are Germans and Americans, but no German-Americans. William never has to sit up at night for the purpose of finding out how many votes
he has polled in sixty-seven out of a possible ninety-four precincts in Cincinnati.

Milwaukee Sentinel: Collier's Weekly
is "nauseated" because some punishments of the lads at West Point
were omitted on the occasion of the visit there of the Russian peace envoys. Collier's Weekly is looking yellow again, and should take something for its liver.

Green Bay Gazette: In selecting a candidate for governor the half breeds
as well as the stalwart camp: bear in mind that the next campaign falls in the "off year" and that there will be no presidential ticket to pull a republican candidate through. Under the circumstances harmony is not to be "sneezed at."

Superior Telegram: A good many people have been inquiring why the decision in the famous Taggart divorce case at Wooster, Ohio, has been so long delayed. It appears that after the judge had heard all of the evidence he collapsed and had to go to bed. At this writing we have not learned what became of the jury, but
the judge is said to have emerged
from his bed a few days ago.

London Punch: The bishop of Manchester declares that if the people will not come to church the church must go to the people and follow them to their week-end resorts. It is, we hear,
proposed to make a start by supplying golf links with missionaries, who will sing a short hymn after each drive.
In the event of a fizzle the hymn will be sung with extraordinary vigor in order to drown any lay remarks that may be made.

Milwaukee Free Press: Persons who read Washington dispatches to the New York Press are supposedly in a position to know all about the future
plans of Gov. Robert M. La Follette.
* * * The failure of the Washington person who sends all of this wisdom to New York to name the "friends" of the governor, who were at the conference when all of these decisions were made, suggests that the story is only the gentle piping of a harmless Washington correspondent: as of course it is.

Madison Journal: That was a surprising election held in Marinette the other day. The proposition was to bond the city for $100,000 to be devoted to the procuring of new industries for the city. Strange to say,
there were but 102 votes against it,
the affirmative vote being 1074. It is a manufacturing city and the people
are impressed by the value to them
of industries. How would our people
take a proposition of that sort?
Wouldn't it bring to the "State Journal" a fine harvest of communications
signed "Tax Payer" and "1837"?

Merrill Advocate: Men can give ul-
terance to some extremely foolish sentiments. An Iowa man gushes forth with the ponderous and elaborately thought out plan to make the president of the United States—when his term of office is over—the arbiter
in all world disputes. He suggests that his headquarters be in the new temple of peace at "The Hague" and that all the nations unite to pay him
a municipal salary. Here Mr.
Roosevelt could settle all wars, and restore peace. The gentleman from Iowa states further that Mr. Roosevelt is "an instrument in the hand of God," and that we must surrender him
to the world at large for the universal good of mankind. The only joy we get out of this dreary monologue is the thought that it probably makes
Mr. Roosevelt extremely tired.

Marquette Eagle-Star: If anybody
thinks football is a modern game they are mistaken. The Chicago Tribune
last Wednesday contained a picture of a scene drawn by A. Forester for the Illustrated News, which shows the game as it was played in 1514. It was so popular in London and so many people joined in the game while it was being played in the streets that the merchants petitioned the king to put it down. Edward accordingly issued a proclamation which ran: "Foras-
much as there is great noise in the city caused by bustling over large balls, from which many evils might arise, which God forbid, we command and forbid on behalf of the king, on pain of punishment, such games to be used in the city in future."

Milwaukee Journal: Somebody
played the part of a fool when Rosen
and Witte paid a visit to West Point.
The joyful occasion was marked by the remitting of punishments awarded to a number of cadets. That is using royalty for sure. It is a habit that has already been carried to an extent that makes Americans ridiculous. In Europe, does the sultan's favored wife give birth to an heir,
out of prison pop a few red-headed murderers. If an emperor swings
around the circle without being honored, he marks the occasion with imperial pardons. In our own country
we have governors and mayors who exercise their pardoning power on

Christmas and other holidays for no
more logical reasons than it is done
in Europe by royalty. We don't want a king or anything that looks like a king in this country. This is a republic, big enough to make its own
precedents and laws and customs.
Let all of us, big and little, cut out
the whole sycophantic business.

KICKERS' KOLUM

My Dear Gazette: What is your opinion of the literary merit of "Under the Yoke?" The serials that have appeared were weak enough, but this is rotten. "Cut it out." I have read the Gazette for thirty-five years and it is with grief that the sheet is filled with such stuff. The author don't know of what he writes no more than a hog does of Sanscrit. Can you give us a history of Thorneapple, all right?
Dietz is a tramp, but what is it all about?

In answer to the above communication it should be said in defense of the story "Under the Yoke" written by Elizabeth Miller referred to in the above letter that it is one of the ten best selling books of the year. For persons unaccustomed to biblical lore
and not interested in ancient history
it is doubtless dull reading. The story was selected because of the prominence of its writer, Miss Miller,
and because it was highly recommended by the press of the country. In answer further it may be said that the Gazette has received compliments
on the selections of the past and each one has been chosen only after due consideration. It would be impossible
in a short space to give a full account of the Dietz affair and beyond saying that Mr. Dietz has held up valuable property of the logging company because he claimed damages for the logs being floated across his property. Just at present the following dispatch
explains his position:

John F. Dietz, who for nearly two years has detained 18,000,000 feet of logs belonging to the Chippewa Lumber & Boom Co. of Chippewa Falls,
at the Cameron dam on the Thorneap-
ple river, and his partner, Valentine Weisenbach, will be tried on the charge of attempt to murder in the circuit court for Chippewa county next week.

The complaint against Dietz and Weisenbach is signed by J. F. Riordan, municipal judge for Sawyer county, and charges that they with having "deliberately and wilfully and forethoughtfully attempted to kill and murder on May 8, 1904, when Patrick McGin, a log driver, was shot in the arm."

How to get Dietz is a conundrum that is puzzling the officers. He still keeps guard over the dam and permits no person to approach it.
Signs are placed around his premises
warning people to keep away. Dietz never leaves the house without his Winchester.

To the Editor: Can you find space
in your columns for the following little poem? It might be called a verse
on Academy street at the present time:

TREATMENT OF PAVEMENTS.
They took a little gravel,
And they took a little tar
With various ingredients
Imported from afar.
They hammered it and rolled it,
And when they went away
They said they had a pavement.
That would last for many a day.
But they came with picks and spades
To lay a water main;
And they called the workmen
To put it back again.
To run a railway cable
They took it up some more;
And they put it back again.
Just where it was before.
They took it up for conduits
To run the telephone;
And then they put it back again.
As hard as any stone.
They took it up for wires
To feed the electric light.
And then they put it back again.
Which was no more than right.
Oh, the pavement's full of furrows.
You'd like to ride upon it.
But it's seldom that you dare.
It's a very handsome pavement;
A credit to the town.
They're always diggin' of it up
Or puttin' of it down.
—Washington Star.

Editor Gazette: I clip the following from last evening's Gazette:
"Saturday night two LeGee girls,
aged about sixteen years, were found
drinking beer in a West Milwaukee
street saloon and escorted by Officer Fanning to the police office. After giving them, warning to keep out of such places henceforth, Chief Apple-
by allowed them to depart."
Did the chief of police give any warning to the saloon-keeper who sold liquor to the two young girls? Was not such a sale contrary to law and should not the license of a saloon-
keeper who sells liquor to minors—
especially girls—be revoked?

Yours truly,
RICHARD VALENTINE.
N. B.—by the editor: City Marshal Appleby notified the proprietor of the saloon in question that this offense
would pass with a warning, but a repetition of the affair would mean arrest and possible revocation of the license. The proprietor promised obedience, but claimed ignorance of any previous order.

MRS. C. F. KRUSE,

of 108 Park Place, Janesville,

wake up the other morning in distress with her teeth. That a dentist must be consulted was evidently an urgent matter. The question was: Who to consult? Naturally her mind turned to Dr. Richards, who is the Janesville dentist who makes a specialty of painless work.

She thought of her many friends who had recommended Dr. Richards as a skillful and careful dentist with years of experience as training. Of course she appreciated these qualifications and to make a long story short, she chose him to do her dental work. Ask her how she liked his work. She can't say enough in praise of the case with which he extracted her teeth and declares he did not hurt her a particle. What he did in the way of painless work for her, he surely can do for you if you are in need in a dental way. Dr. Richards may be found during business hours in his office over Hall & Sayles' jewelry store on West Milwaukee street.

ALICE FISCHER IN 18TH CENTURY PLAY

"The School For Husbands" Was Admirably Presented Before A Large Audience Last Night.

"Some husbands are born to goodness, some achieve goodness, and some have goodness thrust upon them—by their wives. Teach him, dear Lady Manners, that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Do as he does." Acting on this advice of Captain Lovel of the Royal Guards Lady Belinda dried her tears and began her campaign to win back the affection she had lost. Crossing the barrier that had separated her from the capricious, useless, and dissolute life of her time, she became as one of the struggling, mining, artificial creatures who surrounded her. The indifferent husband awoke to a realization of the jewel he had lost, became insanely jealous of the men who paid her court, entertained suspicions which seemed to be well-grounded, raged at his future and vented his impotent wrath in duels, and finally in the hour of his financial ruin came as a penitent to sue for forgiveness.

This, in brief, is the story of "The School for Husbands," a delightful comedy of the eighteenth century presented by Alice Fischer and her company before a large audience at the Myers theatre last evening. The pardon was granted by "Lady Manners" in a manner much more gracious than was Petrucchio's in "The Taming of the Shrew." This, of course, was as it should be. "Sir John" wasn't such a bad chap. Among men of our own times he would have passed for a "good fellow," even in the height of his reckless living, and neglect of his home would be easily condoned by placing all the blame on the wife.

While there is nothing very intricate or new in the plot, the play has a number of interesting situations and the book abounds in clever epigrams. Miss Fischer portrays the part of "Lady Manners" with dignity and dash, tempered with sufficient dignity to please her audience. Joseph Kilgour does some strong and virile acting in the part of "Sir John" and makes that character redeem himself without losing the respect of the "male contingent" of the onlookers. Miss Frances Stevens is very good as "Clarissa," George Paxton makes a droll "Lord Foppington," Miss Jennie Reiffard is admirable as "Lady Sneakwell," the veteran kossip, Paul Everett, presents an amusing and sometimes tiresome character in "Prince Assam," the East Indian painter, and Jane Wheatley's "Lady Airish" is a very amusing conception. Miss Pola La Follette has the part of "Betty," the maid, and presents a characterization which is vivacious but not overdone. Her many friends in the audience last night were well pleased with her work.

Some of the costumes worn might well have aroused envy of the eighteenth century. The company visited both two cities in Wisconsin and Janesville was fortunate to be one of them.

STATE LICENSE WAS NOT ENOUGH HERE

And Milwaukee Apple Vender Who Insisted That It Was Felt Into Hands of Marshal Appleby.

Yesterday the first license money was collected under the ordinance relating to peddlers passed on Oct. 15. A Milwaukee vender by the name of P. S. Friedman arrived here with a carload of apples and started to sell them on the streets. City Marshal Appleby promptly took him under his wing and escorted him to the city hall, where, after much argument, he paid the fee of $2. He asked if this license would be good from two o'clock Tuesday until the same hour today and was told in plain terms that it would not be good after midnight Tuesday and that if he wished to sell goods today he would have to pay another $2. This morning the visitor went on selling apples without renewing his license and the marshal again nabbed him in front of Jones' grocery on South Main. This time he put Friedman in the lockup and gave him a few minutes to reflect on the gravity of his offense. After that the Milwaukee man who thought a state license was all that he needed in Janesville was glad to hand over the money.

SCHOOL BOARD CLERK BROUGHT INTO COURT

M. N. Wheeler of Town of Turtle Must Face Charge of Being Derelict in Performance of Duty.

At the behest of residents of school district No. 9 in the town of Turtle, an action has been commenced in municipal court against M. N. Wheeler, clerk of the school board in that locality, for refusing to call a meeting of the said board after six electors of the district had requested him to do so. Under Section 4550 of the statutes the clerk of a school board must call a special meeting when five electors of the district present a signed request to that effect and failure to so act renders the said officer criminally liable. There is another count in the complaint reciting that when he did finally call a meeting it was on a date that would defeat the object of the meeting. Mr. Wheeler appeared in court this morning and his examination was set for Oct. 9. In the interim he is to remain in the custody of the officers, which means that he may be arrested and detained should it be deemed expedient. Since the school in District 9 was closed, some claim in a questionable manner, a lively war has been raging between those who want it opened again and the board, which insists on its remaining closed.

SCOTT FISHER DIED SHORTLY AFTER NOON

Demise Occurred At Palmer Memorial Hospital—A Young Man of Exemplary Character.

Several minutes after one o'clock this afternoon death claimed Scott W. Fisher at the Palmer Memorial hospital. His demise was the result of an illness and operation, having been taken sick two weeks ago Friday. On the following Thursday he was taken to the hospital and on Friday Dr. Kahke, a specialist from Chicago, was sent for. An operation of three hours' duration was performed, but little hope for his recovery was given by the attending physicians. He survived this eleven days and his tenacity of life was considered remarkable. The deceased was born in the town of Center April 23, 1888, and was the son of the late Sherman Fisher and Mrs. Lydia Fisher. He had lived in this city for some time and his hosts of friends and admiring friends anxiously awaited the outcome of his malady. He had studied one year in the high school but on account of sickness had been kept from school during the past two winters, and had planned to return this fall. He was a young man of high character and many sterling qualities and his loss will be regretted greatly. There are left to mourn besides his mother one sister, Miss Hazel Fisher. The remains were taken to the home of Mrs. Fisher's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Crowe, at 302 Center avenue. Notice of the funeral will be given later.

Mrs. E. W. Semmons
Funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. E. W. Semmons of Moline, Ill., were held this afternoon at half-past two o'clock from the home of the deceased's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Heinrich, at 205 South Bluff street. Rev. J. H. Tippet officiated and the pallbearers were John Heinrich, James Quirk, Joseph Heinrich, Hans Jackle, George Semmons and Myers Rasmussen. Burial was in Oak Hill.

CURRENT NEWS NOTES.

Wee Folks' Band: Yesterday the Wee Folks' Band, a missionary society composed of little people whose ages range from one to five years, enjoyed its annual meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church. The young people, most of whom were accompanied by their parents, partook of refreshments at small tables and enjoyed a series of games and amusements especially arranged for the occasion. The annual offering is to be devoted to missionary purposes.

Good Town for Team: Morris Crall, who managed the Oshkosh baseball club during the early part of the season, has returned to his old home in Janesville and may spend the winter here. If he does so it is not unlikely that he will make an effort to organize a baseball team for the state league here next year. No city in Wisconsin has better material, in Mr. Crall's opinion.

To Build Addition: Blair & Summers are to build the 4x60 brick addition to the Hough Shade Corporation's factory in Spring Brook. The additional space is to be used for a storage house. This is evidence of the healthy growth of the company's business is pleasing to all who are interested in the welfare of the city.

Framed in Window-Sash: While enthused by too many stirrups-cups one night this week, Nate Thornton took a hop, skip, and a jump across the floor of a second-story bedroom in his house on North Bluff street, and made a dive for the window. The contemplated flight through the clear night was rudely checked by splintered glass and it was necessary for his wife to assist in extricating him from the wreckage. When Officer Morrissey appeared on the scene, a man with a badly cut head had vanished and Mrs. Thornton was nursing a gash received in her efforts to free the ambitious husband from his crystal frame.

Interurban Killed Horse: Eight miles south of Janesville last evening the R. B. & J. Interurban car duo here at 11:45 struck and so badly injured a horse that it had to be put out of misery with a bullet. The tender of the car was badly bent, but otherwise no damage was done.

History Club Begins Work: At the rooms in Central hall block Monday the Twentieth Century History club commenced its work for the year. Mrs. H. G. Carter was leader and there were about thirty members in attendance. The fascinating study of French history is to be continued this season.

Drunks in Court: Joe Hutter and Tom Kelly pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness in municipal court today and the former paid a fine and costs amounting to $4.10 and the latter a sum amounting to $3.10. Tom Noonan pleaded not guilty when he was brought in this morning and it was arranged that the time for his examination should be set this afternoon.

Enter the Straw Hat.

Straw hats were first heard of in England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. In the reign of James I. we learn of Lord William Howard paying the then large sum of $18 for two straw hats.

To Clean Plaster Ornaments.

Plaster of paris ornaments may be cleaned by covering them with a thick layer of starch, letting it dry thoroughly, then brushing off with a stiff brush.

European Countries Tax Salt.

Salt is in many European countries a heavily taxed government monopoly. Itly patrols its beaches to prevent poor people from evaporating sea water for low grade salt.

RHEUMATISM CAN NOT BE RUBBED AWAY

When the joints are sore and swollen, and the muscles throbbing with the pain of Rheumatism, relief must be had at once, and it is natural to rub the affected parts with liniments, oils, etc. This treatment does good in a way, by temporarily relieving the pain and reducing the inflammation, but has no effect on the disease itself, because Rheumatism is more than skin deep; it is in the blood and cannot be rubbed away. Rheumatism is brought on by indigestion, weak kidneys, poor bowel action, stomach troubles and a general sluggish condition of the system. The refuse and waste matters, which should be carried off through the natural avenues of bodily waste, are left to sour and form uric acid and other irritating poisons which are absorbed by the blood, making it thin, weak and acrid. Then instead of nourishing the different nerves, muscles, joints and tissues it fills them with poison to produce the aches, pains and other disagreeable symptoms of the disease. Rheumatism is usually worse in Winter for the reason that cold and dampness are exciting causes. The nerves become excited and sting with pain, the muscles are sore and drawn, the joints swollen and stiff and the sufferer lives in intense agony; and if the disease is not checked, it often leaves its victims helpless cripples for life. Rheumatism cannot be rubbed away but it can be driven from the blood by S. S. S. Being a perfect blood purifier this great remedy soon produces a complete change in the entire circulation; the thin, acrid blood is made pure and rich, and as it goes through the body nourishes and soothes the irritated nerves, eases the throbbing muscles, and dissolves and carries off of the system the irritating particles in the joints which are keeping up the pain and inflammation. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism permanently, and in addition tones up the digestion and stimulates the different members of the body to their full duty so there is no cause for another attack. Do not waste time trying to rub Rheumatism away, but get it out of the blood with S. S. S. so that the cold and dampness of Winter will not keep you in continual pain and agony. Special book on Rheumatism and any medical advice will be given free.

While at work for the F. C. & P. R. R. in the swampy region, I contracted Rheumatism and was completely helpless for about four months and spent over $150.00 with doctors, but got worse every day and finally quit them and began S. S. S. I took a few bottles and was cured sound and well. My health is now splendid and I weigh 175 pounds. There is a lady living near me who is now taking S. S. S. for acute Rheumatism. For two months she could not turn herself in bed, but since beginning your medicine about three weeks ago has improved rapidly, and is now able to sit up. I can recommend S. S. S. to all suffering from Rheumatism.

Uiah, N. C. S. C. LASSITER.

I was severely troubled with Rheumatism. I had it in my knees, legs and ankles, and any one who has ever had Rheumatism knows how excruciating the pain is and how it interferes with one's work. I was truly in bad shape—having been bothered with it for ten years, off and on. A local physician advised me to use S. S. S. I did so. After taking two bottles I noticed the soreness and pain were greatly reduced. I continued the medicine and was thoroughly cured; all pain, soreness and inflammation gone. I recommend S. S. S. to all Rheumatic sufferers.

THE GODET COAT FOR WINTER WEAR

The long and loose garment unquestionably has the call for winter wear, especially in the separate wrap that is to be the feature of the season. A dark shade of mahogany red satin-faced cloth fashions this charming coat, upon which velvet of a slightly deeper tint and elaborate designs worked out in narrow soutache bring by hand make for the trimming scheme. The coat sets smoothly over the shoulders, and from there hangs in full, soft folds that increase in fullness to the hem. The sleeve is a full slight pattern, plaited at the shoulder and having the fullness laid in plaits at the wrist above the cuff. A suggestion of a vest effect is achieved in the velvet inset around the V neck, and the cuff is likewise of this same rich material.

LOSES HEAVILY IN SPECULATION

Big Cotton Concern Suffering From Effect of Trades in Option.

PRESIDENT OWES LARGE SUM

Individual Account Shows Indebtedness of $481,000, While Buffalo Mill Is Also a Debtor to the Extent of $500,000.

Union, S. C., Oct. 4.—Speculation in cotton, entailing huge losses, has placed the Union Cotton mills, one of the largest concerns of the kind in the south, in a state of financial embarrassment, and creditors have filed a petition for involuntary bankruptcy in the United States district court in Charleston.

At a special meeting of stockholders here it was brought out that the mill had lost $80,000 since Jan. 1 through speculation.

Expert accountants told the stockholders that the liabilities of the company amounted to $2,700,000. They said the enterprise had been a losing one for several years, maintaining itself only through speculation, which for a time proved successful.

President Owes Heavily.

The report also showed that President Duncan was individually indebted to the mill $481,000 and the Buffalo mill, with which he is connected, is indebted to it in the sum of $500,000. President Duncan made a lengthy statement in which he said that his borrowings were secured by stock in other enterprises which he had put out. It is officially reported that some of the stockholders demanded his resignation as president and director, but he refused to resign.

The company has two weeks in which to show cause why it should not be adjudged bankrupt. The papers were at once sent here in the hands of a United States deputy marshal.

Panic on 'Change.

New York, Oct. 4.—Conditions closely resembling a panic ensued on the cotton exchange Tuesday when the government's crop report was announced from the pulpit on the edge of the trading pit. Prices dropped thirty points or the equivalent of $1.50 a bale within two minutes, and it was reported that the members of the bull pools and their enthusiastic followers were hard hit by the break.

These cliques have been bulling the cotton market for a month or so. Many thousands of bales which were accumulated during the recent manipulative movements were thrown overboard. Selling orders poured in from every side, and for several moments demoralization reigned in the pit, which was crowded with excited brokers and representatives of prominent Wall street houses.

When W. V. King, superintendent of the exchange, read the government's figures, showing the condition of cotton to be 71.2 per cent as against 72.1 per cent last month and 75.8 per cent last year, prices broke with a rush and the bull leaders ran to cover.

Great surprise is expressed at the estimate. Inasmuch as there has been no intimation that any speculator or group of speculators received it before others, it is assumed to be a fair report. At the department of agriculture assurances are given that the system of estimating done under the direction of Assistant Secretary Hays, as acting chief statistician, is surrounded with all possible restrictions to prevent manipulation of the figures or leakage of advance information.

Baseball

Career of Dicky Padden of St. Louis—Flick, Cleveland Star.

Richard Padden, late the second baseman and captain of the St. Louis Americans, was born in Maryland Ferry, O., Sept. 17, 1870, where he learned to play ball. He made his professional debut as a pitcher with the team in 1893, along with the now famous Chick Stahl.

In a short time Padden was made manager captain and second baseman of the team.

In 1896 Connie Mack signed him for Pittsburgh and "fanned" him to Toronto. He was recalled when Barnhart was injured and became Pittsburgh's regular second baseman. He remained with Pittsburgh until 1903, when he joined the St. Louis National league club. The following year he went over to the new St. Louis American league club, with which he played until last spring, when he retired temporarily owing to poor health. He has since acted as player agent of the St. Louis American club. He is mentioned as possible manager in 1906 of the St. Louis National club.

He will not return to active work, however, until absolutely certain that his health will enable him to do himself justice. He may purchase some minor league club outright and finish his baseball career as a minor league manager.

Robert Unglaub, substitute infielder of the Boston American league club, was born in Baltimore, July 31, 1871. He began his career as a catcher on amateur teams and then went to the University of Maryland. In 1899 he was the star at the bat and in the field. In 1900 Thomas L. Kelly, then manager of the Meriden (Conn.) team, secured Unglaub. In his first season as a professional he batted for .321, ran bases timely and showed all round speed of a high order.

In 1903 he was the star of the Milwaukee American association club. That fall he was drafted by the New York American league club, which, in June, 1904, gave him to Boston as part consideration in the deal for outfielder Dougherty. He finished that season as Boston's substitute and was resigned for this year. He is a man of most exemplary habits and an excellent all round player.

Elmer Flick, the famous outfielder of the Cleveland club of the American league, is an Ohio boy, having been born at Bedford, in the Buckeye State, on Jan. 11, 1870. His first professional experience was with Youngstown in 1890, he playing thirty games with that team.

In 1897 he attracted national attention by his brilliant work with the Dayton club, and Manager Stallings of the Philadelphia National league club purchased his release along with Willy Platt that fall. In 1898 he at once made good with Philadelphia and remained right fielder of that club until 1902, when he joined the rival Athletic club of Philadelphia.

When the Pennsylvania supreme court decision affirming the validity of the option clause in the National league contract was announced Flick refused to return to the Philadelphia club. Instead, he, with Lajoie and Bernhardt, joined the Cleveland club, thus at once making that club a pennant factor and a paying business proposition. By his act Flick placed himself in contempt of court, but when the Cincinnati peace treaty was signed the ban in Pennsylvania against Flick, Lajoie and Bernhardt was lifted with the assent of the Philadelphia National club and Cleveland's title to the three great players was made clear.

Prof. Frank R. Jacoby, a teacher of music at Lake Forest and Komper Hall, was acquitted at Kenosha on Tuesday of the charge of striking Mrs. Henry Halberstadt.

CHAPTER XXIII. THE SACRIFICE.

THE royal architect sat at his place in the workroom, but no papyrus scrolls lay before him. His fine implements were not in sight. The ink pots and pens were put away, and the table was clear except for a copper lamp that glittered and flared at one end. The great artist's arms were extended across the table, his head bowed upon them, his hands clasped. The attitude was not that of weariness, but of trouble.

Kenkenes hesitated. For the first time since the hour he left Memphis for Thebes, months before, he felt a sense of culpability. He realized with great bounds of comprehension that the results of his own trouble had not been confined to himself. He began to understand how infectious sorrow is.

He crossed the room and laid a trembling hand on his father's shoulder. Instantly the great artist lifted his head and, seeing Kenkenes, leaped to his feet with a cry that was all joy.

The young man responded to the kiss of welcome with so little composure that Mentu forced him down on the bench and summoned a servant.

"Rachel—thou knowest!" Kenkenes began, speaking with an effort.

"Aye, I know. Didst find her?"

"Aye, and lost her even while I fought to save her!"

"Alas, thou unfortunate!" Mentu exclaimed. "Of a surety the gods have punished thee too harshly!"

"Kenkenes was not in the frame of mind to receive so soft a speech composedly. A strong tremor ran over him, and he averted his face. The architect came to his side and smoothed the damp hair.

"Thou needest, further, the attention of thy slave, Kenkenes," he suggested.

The young man shook his head. "Not yet," he said. "My time is short, and it is thy help I need."

Without further introduction Kenkenes plunged into his story. He had had no time to tell it four days before. Then he had asked for Rachel with his second word and, finding her not, had rushed immediately to the search for her.

Mentu heard without comment till the story was done. Most of it he had known from Holoer, and only the recent events at the tomb excited him.

When Kenkenes made an end the architect brought his clenched hand down on the table with a force that made the lamp wink and the implements rattle in their boxes above him.

"Curse that smooth villain Holoer!" he cried in a tempest of wrath. "A murderer upon his greedy, crafty lust! The gods blast him in his knavery! Now is my precious amulet in his hands. Would it were white hot and clung to him like a leech! Did I not wage thee from the first?"

Kenkenes raised his head.

"Can you avoid a knife if he hath designs on you?" he asked. "Have I erred, in crossing his will? Have I sinned in loving and protecting her whom I love?"

Mentu's hands fell down at his sides. The simple questions had silenced him. His son was blameless now that he had expiated his offenses against the law, and from the moral standpoint his persistence in his claim on Rachel was just—praiseworthy.

"Nay," he said sullenly, "but since thou didst love her, how came it that thou didst not wed her long ago and save her this shame and danger?"

"The bar of faith lay between us," Kenkenes answered. "I was an idolater, she a worshiper of the one God. She would not wed with me, therefore."

"So much for Israelitish zeal! Thou hast been a pawn for her to play during these months. Long ago had she surrendered if thou hadst been!"

Kenkenes smiled. "She did not surrender. It was I."

"Thy faith?" the architect asked in a voice low with earnestness.

"Thou hast said!"

A dead silence ensued. Kenkenes may have awaited the outbreak with a quickening of the heart, but it did not come. Instead, the architect sat down on the bench and gazed at his son intently.

After a long interval he spoke.

"Thou art a Jew! I hoped that thou wast taken by the Israelite but in thy fancy. The hope was vain. Thou art in love with her."

Kenkenes endured the steady gaze and waited for Mentu to go on.

"There is no help for thee now," the architect continued stoically. "If the gods will but tolerate thee till the madness leaves thee after thou art wedded and satisfied, it may be that thou wilt turn again to the faith of thy fathers. But if I should fix thee in thine apostasy I should try to persuade thee now."

"Aye, and, further, I should be moved to urge thee into heresy," calmly responded Kenkenes.

The artist flung up one hand in a gesture of dissent and, arising, walked toward the door of the workroom. There he leaned his shoulder against the frame and looked out at the night. Presently Kenkenes went to him and laid his hand on his sleeve.

"I am going to Tanis," Kenkenes began, with forced restraint, "to discover if Holoer hath taken Rachel. If he hath, the Lord God make iron of my hands till I strangle him!"

"Madman!" Mentu exclaimed. "Thou wilt be hanged!"

"By assured that I shall earn the slaying! The punishment shall be no more savage than the deed that invites it! But enough of that! If I go to Tanis and find her the spoil of the fan bearer, thine angry will hold. I return not to Memphis. She may have returned to her people. And if she be

"Thou wilt go with her out of Egypt?"

In Goshen I must reach her, find her, before her people depart. Having found her"—But Kenkenes stopped and made no effort to resume. Mentu set his teeth, his hands clenched, and his whole figure seemed to denote intense physical restraint. Suddenly he whirled upon his son.

"Thou wilt go with her out of Egypt?" he demanded.

"I shall go with her out of Egypt."

An hour later, when it was far into the second watch, Kenkenes changed his dress and made himself presentable. Then, without further counsel with the market, he went silently and unobserved to the portal of Sencl's house.

After a long time, for her household had been asleep, he was admitted, and the Lady Sencl, perplexed and surprised, joined him in the chamber of guests.

With few and simple words he told his story, pictured his father's loneliness and while she wept silently begged her to become his father's wife-on the morrow.

There was no long persuasion. The need of the occasion was sufficient eloquence for the royal architect's noble love.

An hour after the next day's sunrise Mentu and Sencl repaired together to the temple, and when they returned Sencl went not again into her own house.

In preparing for his departure Kenkenes asked at the hands of his father not his patrimony, for that would have been an embarrassment of wealth, but such portion of it as might be carried in small bulk. In mid-afternoon Sencl brought him a belt of gazelle hide, and in this had been sewed a fortune in gems. The architect had given his son his full portion and more.

At the close of day, with his face set and colorless, Kenkenes stepped into the narrow passage before his father's house. The great portal closed slowly and noiselessly behind him. He did not pause, but sprang into his chariot and was driven rapidly away.

At a landing near the northern limits of Memphis he took a punt, bade farewell to his sad faced charioteer and pushed off.

The broken bluffs about Memphis, the temples, the obelisks, the sphinx, the pyramids, melted into night behind him. He kept his head down that he might not look his last on his native city.

He had reached that point where endurance must conserve itself.

CHAPTER XXIV. THE TRAITORS.

THE morning of the second day after the lifting of the darkness lay golden over Egypt, blue shadowed before the houses and trees to the west and shimmering and illusory toward the east. A slow moving, fragmentary cloud had gathered in the zenith just after dawn, and for many minutes over the northern part of Goshen there had been a perpendicular downpour of illuminated rain. Now the sky was as clear and blue as a sapphire, and the little wind was burdened with odorous scents from the clean washed pastures of Israel.

Serl had crossed the border into Goshen at daybreak and was now well into the grazing lands, yet scintillating with the rain. The boots of his fat little horse were pelted with wet sand of the roadway, and there was no dust on the prince's modest raiment. Behind the youth plodded two heavy headed, limp eared sumpter mules driven by a big boned black.

Serl was not far from his destination, an obscure village of image makers directly south of Tanis and situated on the northern border of Goshen. The same region that furnished clay to Israel for Egypt's bricks afforded material for terra cotta statuettes.

Ahead of him were fields with clouds of sheep upon the uplands and cattle standing under the shade of dom palms. Here and there hovels with thatched no higher than a man's head or low tents dark with long use and lifted at one side stood in a setting of green. About them were orderly and productive gardens. Nowhere was any sign of the desolation that prevailed over Egypt.

Serl looked upon the beautiful prosperity of Goshen at first with the natural delight loveliness inspires and then with as much savage resentment as his young soul could feel. Belting this garden and stretching for 700 miles to the south was Egypt, desolate, barren and countess. The God of the Hebrews had avenged them fearfully.

"They had provoked," he muttered to himself, "but they have overdone their vengeance."

A figure appeared on the road over the comb of a slight ridge, and Serl regarded the wayfarer with interest.

He was a Hebrew. His draperies were loose, voluminous, heavily fringed and of such silky texture of linen that they flowed in the light wind. His head was covered with a wide kerchief, which was bound with a cord and hid the forehead.

He was of good stature and upright, but his draperies were so ample that the structure of his frame was not discernible. His eyes were black, bright and young in their alertness, but the beard that rippled over his breast to his girdle was as white as the foam of the Middle sea.

The Hebrew walked in the grass by the roadside and came on, his face expectant. At sight of the prince he stepped into the roadway. Serl drew up.

"Thou art Serl-Meneptah?" the ancient wayfarer asked.

"Even so," the prince answered. The Hebrew put back his kerchief and stood uncovered.

"Dost thou know me, my son?" he asked.

"Thou art that Aaron of the able tongue, brother to Moses. Where is thy brother?"

"Moses has departed for Tanis."

"And named thee in his stead. But his mission to my father's capital bodes no good. He might have stayed until I could have persuaded him into friendship."

"Not with all thy gold," said Aaron gravely.

"Nay, I had not meant that," Serl rejoined, with some resentment. "If Egypt's plight cannot win mercy from him by its own piteousness, the treasure I bring is not enough."

The Hebrew waved his hand as if to dismiss the subject.

"Thou hast put faith in thine enemy. A woman hath deceived thee."

"What dost thou tell me?" Serl cried, leaping to the ground and angrily confronting Aaron.

"A truth," the Hebrew answered calmly. "The Princess Tasher is a fugitive charged with treason."

Serl turned cold and snote his forehead. "Undone through me!" he groaned.

"Not so, my son. Thou art undone through her. Thy blind trust hath already wrought havoc with thee. Let it not bring heavy punishment upon thy head. Thou hast dealt kindly with me, and I am beholden to thee. Give me leave to discharge my debt."

"Say on," said the prince.

The Hebrew began at once.

"What I tell thee, O my son, will soon be talked abroad over the land. But if thou hast a doubt in thy heart and art like to question my truth speaking there are witnesses I may summon such as no wise man will deny."

"Last night I lay under the tent of a son of Israel at Pitim. When I arose, two hours before dawn, horsemen began to gallop through the city toward the south. The inhabitants were aroused. There was much running to and fro, and the inn was full of lights."

"We approached, and when the tumult had died and the Egyptians were so full of the tidings that they were glad to relieve themselves even to an Israelite, I asked and learned their story. Many times afterward on my way hither I heard it from the lips of men whom I passed, so I am not deceived."

MOTHERHOOD

How To Gain The Happiness Of Children

Motherhood is woman's highest sphere in life. It is the fruition of her dearest hopes and most holy desires. Yet thousands of noble women, through the derangement of the female generative organs brought on by female weakness and disease, are unable to produce children!

Ninety-nine times out of every one hundred Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will so restore and strengthen the female organism as to make child bearing possible, easy, and safe.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

with its record of thousands of cures, is the remedy for women. Thousands of women are happy mothers of beautiful children to-day because in time of need they took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No matter what your female weakness or disease, it will afford you speedy relief and cure. Every woman who desires to become a mother should read these letters:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I had been married seven years and had no children, owing to a female weakness and womb trouble, which caused me severe suffering each month. A lady advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did so, and now I have no more pains and am perfectly well, besides having a fine baby boy. Mrs. ROSA F. KAREL, Ravenna, Neb.

Another happy and grateful mother writes to Mrs. Pinkham as follows:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I was very anxious for a child, but could not carry one to maturity. My husband advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and soon began to feel better in every way. I continued its use and was enabled to carry my next child to maturity. I now have a nice baby girl, and I feel like a new woman. Mrs. FRANK BEYER, 22 S. Second St., Meriden, Conn.

Actual sterility in woman is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all would-be and expectant mothers. Her letter will give you valuable information.

WEATHER GOOD FOR FARM WORK

Late Crops Mature Rapidly Under Influence of the Sunshine.

Less Than 5 Per Cent is Standing in the Fields of North Central District, Cutting Down Chance of Frost Damage.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The weekly crop bulletin of the weather bureau summarizes crop conditions as follows:

"The weather conditions of the week ending Oct. 2, as a whole, were exceptionally favorable to agricultural interests. Under the influence of warm and generally dry weather throughout the central valleys, lake region and Atlantic coast districts late crops matured rapidly. Florida and portion of the central gulf districts suffered injury from excessive rains, while much needed rains fell in the Rocky mountain and north Pacific coast regions. The middle and south Atlantic states and southern Texas are in need of rain. Frosts occurred in the middle Rocky mountain districts and in the upper Ohio valley, lower lake region and northern portion of the middle Atlantic states, but caused no serious injury.

Large Corn Yield is Assured.

"Highly favorable weather prevailed throughout the principal corn states. An exceptionally large and fine yield of corn is now assured over much of the greater part of the corn belt and only a very small part of the crop in the north central portion, estimated at from 2 to 5 per cent of the total remains exposed to injury from frost, and this is maturing rapidly. The crop in Missouri was extensively blown down or lodged, but notwithstanding this and the damage by September floods the yield in that state will be very heavy.

"A light apple crop is reported nearly everywhere, only a few unimportant apple-producing states indicating satisfactory yields.

"Owing to the extensive prevalence of blight and rot in the principal potato-producing states a light crop of potatoes of inferior quality is generally promised.

"The fall season has been exceptionally favorable for plowing and seeding in the central valley, lake region and middle Atlantic states. In portions of the southern states and in the north Pacific coast dry soil conditions have not been favorable for this work."

Foreign Crop Summary.

Broomhall's weekly foreign crop summary says:

United Kingdom—Weather favorable.

France—Fair progress is being made with plowing. The good quality of wheat is confirmed in the center and west, in the north, however, the quality is very poor. The percentage of milling wheat is given at 64 per cent, against 72 per cent last year.

Germany—There is a large potato crop, but the quality is varied. It is expected that there will continue to be large purchases of wheat and coarse grains.

Hungary—Good progress is being made with plowing.

Russia—Arrivals at ports are being generally maintained.

Italy—The wheat crop this year is estimated at about 150,000,000 bu. against 150,400,000 bu. last year. The crop is now considered decidedly smaller than last year's. Large stocks of foreign grain have been carried over.

MITCHELL DOUBTFUL OF GENERAL STRIKE

Mineworkers' President Sees No Reason Why There Should Be Trouble in Anthracite Region.

Washington, Oct. 4.—"I think the sensational stories printed in many newspapers recently to the effect that there will be a great coal strike next spring are unwarranted," said John Mitchell, president of the United Mineworkers of America, who came here to see President Roosevelt. "As far as I can judge, after having been in the anthracite coal field for some time, everything will work out harmoniously in the end.

"I can see no reason why there should be a general strike next spring. I have not seen the railroad presidents who are also presidents of the companies, and I do not expect to hear from them for some time, but I do expect that in time there will be a readjustment along the lines on which we are now working."

Mr. Mitchell said, in response to a suggestion that large supplies of coal were now being stored away in anticipation of a strike, that he did not take any stock in that story. "This is the time of year," said he, "when coal is always stored in large quantities."

Mr. Mitchell says the response to his efforts to increase the strength of his organization has far exceeded his expectations. The coal situation was not discussed with the president, he said. He came here in the interest of a friend at Scranton, Pa., Louis Hammerling, who is an applicant for the office of internal revenue collector in the Scranton district. He is editor of the Mine Workers Journal.

The miners' leader left for Indianapolis, but he will soon return to the anthracite field.

Walter Jones, a negro, and Tony Shover are taken to Jeffersonville, Ind., reformatory to serve sentences for grand larceny.

THE YELLOWSTONE VALLEY The Yellowstone valley, near Billings, is just now coming into special prominence on account of its different irrigation canals. The Billings canal, east of that town, waters an extremely fertile district, in which alfalfa is a very prolific crop. East of Huntley, on the Crow Indian reservation, which will probably be opened in 1906, various canals are planned by the United States government, which will water a large tract of this very fertile country. Plans are being matured for the erection of a large beet sugar factory at Billings, which will add to the prosperity of this part of the Yellowstone valley.
